Union Gives Evidence In Racket Quiz

Lawyer Says Cases Of Vandalism During Walkout Are 'Phony'

WASHINGTON - (INS) - The United Automobile Workers charged today three alleged acts of violence against non-striking Kohler workers are proven "hoaxes" and claimed evidence that other purported vandalism was phony.

Union Attorney Joseph Rauh, of Washington, made the statements during questioning of Ernest L. Rose of Sheboygan, Wis., a UAW striker, before the Senate Rackets Committee.

Rauh and Rose were blocked in a move to introduce a statement by Mrs. Henry Joyce of Sheboygan, allegedly contending that her husband perpetrated a "hoax" on the insistence of Kohler Company representatives.

Legislative Ax Used On Many Items In McKeldin's Program

ANNAPOLIS UN-Finance committees of the Maryland Legislature continued their economy drive today by slashing more than 51/2 million dollars from Gov.Mc-Keldin's $13,973,800 capital improvements program.

It won't be any help in their tax program to balance the State operating budget but should have a ong range effect for a lower property tax rate. The construction and modernization program for State institutions is financed by long - term bond issues redeemed by the property tax.

Falling under the legislative ax vere the following major items: $1,286,000 for a new geriatrics building at Eastern Shore State Hospital in Cambridge.

$1,045,000 for the University of Maryland to purchase buildings on the campus now owned by the U. S. Department of Interior.

well, there must be satisfaction that free elections have returned to Argentina after a glaring lapse of 30 years. There can be no automatic rejoicing, however, over the first fruits of that return. Caution is compelled by the fact that Arturo Frondizi, the victorious presidential candidate, gained his commanding triumph largely through the support of the Communists and the Peronistas, followers of exiled Dictator Juan Peron.

FRONDIZI represents the left wing but is also an economic nationalist. He declares that he owes no commitments to anyone and will govern in the interests of all Argentina. Neverthe less, some may argue that he cannot help but feel a debt to those groups which supported him. He has promised full political amnesty to Peron's backers. Yet he does not appear willing, on his own, to allow Peron himself to come home. He indicates he will let the Argentine Congress decide that. But top military leaders who ran the country in the two-and-a-half-year interval between Peron's ouster and this election say they won't tolerate the dictator's return.

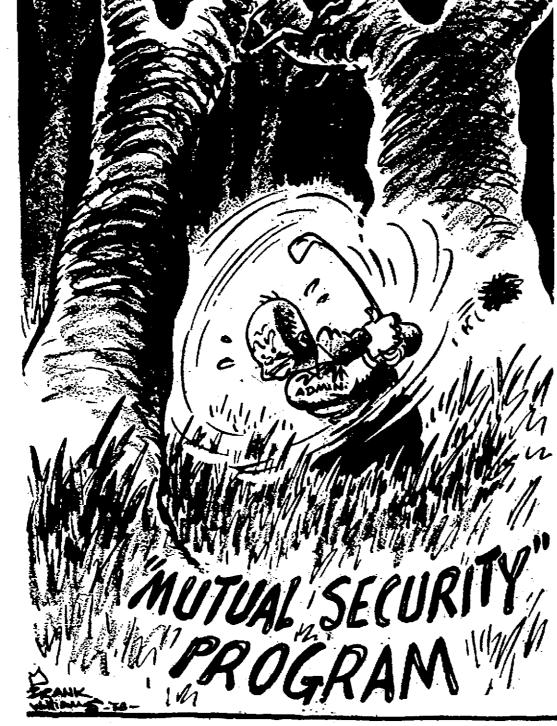

WHATEVER the prospect for Peron, the future for Frondizi seems sure to be heavily crowded. The nation's economic situation is bad, a hangover from the irresponsibilities and the orgies of dictatorship. The new president will have to battle inflation among many other economic ills. As he goes about this task, the Argentine people will have as the guardians of their newfound freedom not only the military but a restored free press. The rest of the world would like to believe that this gives assurance that there will beno more Perons in Argentina. It wishes Frondizi well in his effort to show that this is so, that he will be neither a new master himself nor the captive of the extremists who elected him.

are to be congratulated that they have brought into concrete form an agreement made at the December NATO conference to supply the British with U.S. missiles capable of bearing nuclear warheads. There has been a lot of foolish misunderstanding of nuclear weapons and related matters among some members of Britain's opposition Labor party. In the light of this furore, it is remarkable that the two countries were able to conclude this pact with such reasonable dispatch. The five-year arrangement means we'll furnish some 60 Air Force Thor missiles to be based at three sites in England and one in Scotland. As soon as the RAF learns how to use them, they'll be handed over. But the nuclear warheads will be kept in U.S. custody and released to the British only if needed for actual defense. The arc of Western defenses will be stiffer when similar pacts are concluded with other European nations in the NATO

Ike Sees Many Outsiders In Dull Month

WASHINGTON — The public record of a President's appointments does not wholly describe his activities, but it is strongly revealing of one important aspect. That aspect is the extent to which he sees people outside the Executive branch who are independent of his mood and favor in a way that his own appointees cannot be.

It is a truism that the President is largely insulated from common life. For all the ordinary tasks - food, shelter, service transportation -- he has only to rub the Aladdin's lamp of an extraordinarily efficient White House organization which can command all departments of the government. This spells a kind of freedom.

But from the moment of his election his staff walls him away from people, which has the exactly opposite effect. How to leap over that wall without wasting his energies on non-essentials is his greatest problem.

FEBRUARY is normally a dull month here legislatively. Congress is a slow starter and by mutual consent trims its calendar to help partisan political shows honoring Lincoln, Jefferson and Jackson. Yet this year it saw mounting pressures for a summit meeting, the start of defense reorganization, the kick-off of the difficult foreign aid and reciprocal trade campaigns and a deepening recession. The public record of President Eisenhower's schedule during February, verified by the White House, contains no Senators except Republican Senate leaders at two Monday conferences and only four Representatives except for the House GOP leaders at the two Monday conferences. No members of Federal regulatory agencies, all now under heavy fire from a House subcommittee, called on him. He met with the National Security Council three times, with the Cabinet and press twice and with the chairman of his Economic Advisory Council once.

ON THE RECORD, Secretary of State Dulles, Commerce Secretary Weeks, the Postmaster General and Dr. James R. Killian, his science advisor, called twice. The Vice President, the Secretaries of Labor, Defense and Agriculture and the Attorney General called once.

Ten days were spent on his ill-starred Georgia vacation with its long detour home via Arizona. Here's the record, excluding Feb. 2 and 9 which were Sundays spent here, the other two Sundays of the month being spent in Georgia.

Glancing Sideways

NEW YORK-No matter how you look at it, we are a nation talking and straining to get to the moon and we haven't even learned to clean our highways and streets after a snowstorm.

If, only 20 years ago, every new building in a city had been required to lay steam pipes under the surface from its furnace to half-way across a street, by now we'd get rid of paralyzing snow and ice in a few hours after the fall stopped and if the heat were kept up in the beginning of the snowfall the flakes would never accumulate at all. It's like talking about being a millionaire while unemplayed.

WE MAY BE angry at the French for that senseless bombing of a mud-hut village but the number of small spots in New York called boites, boutiques and bistros continues to grow. For almost two decades we were intested with shoppes as a kneebend to the British. Now any odd collection of frowzy pillows, thin furs and brass lamps is a boutique. And a small glass exhibition case in a hotel lobby is

On Madison Avenue in the 50's there is a shoe store and they call that a bottiere. And an East 50's necktie store, about as tig as the inside of a telephone booth, has a florid gold sign: Cravatiere du Mode. I walked into one of these places the other day and the clerk said: "Hi, suh. Y'all lookin' for somethin' specific?" Took the French atmosphere right out of the place and deposited me on the sidewalk. A LADY CALLED me the oth-

ed day, a perfect stranger, and she said: "Would you like to see a book bound in human skin?" and I said: "Well, I've seen four or five in my life, but I'm always game for another," so I went to her place and she showed me this book. It was Algerian and had to do, she said, with specialties in witchcraft.

The crude illustrations in it made it seem likely she was right. I told her the last book I saw bound in human skin was triangular and was owned by Manley Hall, an occultist in Los Angeles. Manley always claimed it described, in Latin, a chemical formula for eternal life. Being an ignoramus, I couldn't prove he was wrong.

But that, in turn, was the third book I ever saw with a chemical formula which would give eternal life and not one of the owners of these books ever had the courage to make up a galloi, of the stuff and swig it down. They never even tried a teaspoonful of it. But they collected a lot of books about such things and gloated knew of a common household article that was a deadly poison and undectable in autopsy. But a lady at the table, with the most innocent of faces and a bland smile, said sweetly: "Of course. ... " and named the article with all air of having used it many times for lethal purposes. And that stopped that conversation dead in its tracks.

SAW A LADY in her mid-50's. or thereabouts, on Fifth Avenue near the Park entrance the other sunny, warm afternoon and she had on high-button shoes and a feather boa across her shoulders. Being within 25 feet of the carriages that wait near the Plaza, the whole thing had a 1900 look. Ever run out of gas two miles from a gas station, try to thumb a ride and then take stock of those who pass you by and those who pick you up?

It happened near Roslyn, Long Island the other dusk. Three laborers in battered coupes swept by without a glance, as did two carloads of stationed-wagoned women. But a third wagon, with a lone woman it who turned out to be a recognizable name in Manhattan social circles, stopped and she offered to telephone for gas at the next phone and regretted she was going onto a crossroad before she would reach the gas station.

THEN A TINY French Renault came buzzing along and the lone young man in that stopped and took me for gasoline. He was the heir to one of New York's great fortunes and we had fun talking about what kind of people stop and what kind don't. He said he had found that the more insecure the driver, spiritually and economically, the less chance there would be that that driver would stop.

"And I have run out of gas in some awfully weird places," he said. "The only dependable stoppers are Mexicans in Mexico. They always stop. I think they have tremendous curiosity and tremendous grace."

What a disaster for all chan-

IF THERE IS anything that turns the average kid's stomach against a variety of good and sound matters, it is having a bad time with them in school. I know adults who refuse to read books on any subject, because they had a rough bout with them in high school. Other people swear off highbrow music because it reminds them of a "D" they got in "Great Music I."

Personally, I decline to set fireworks, or even shoot my mouth off on July 4th, all because of an unfortunate brush with 9th grade science.

SOONER OR later, in the life of every non-Phi Beta Kappa, there comes a disillusionment with some subject or other. And it seems likely, if most of his future problems can be blamed on television teaching, he will be sickened of the whole medium.

NEW YORK - "A lot of people have it easy in this life," said Erskine Caldwell.

They don't have to work hard, "I do. I have to sweat."

But in the last 30 years Caldwell, a tail, blue-eyed, sorrel-haired man who looks as if he had been quarried from the red earth of his native Georgia, has written 34 books.

They range from the early realism of "Tobacco Road" to his recently completed "Molly Cottontail," a children's story.

This year will mark the film debut of "God's Little Acre," his most successful novel. More than eight million copies have been printed, and it has become the bestselling work of serious fiction ever writtem?)

IT HAS BEEN translated into two-score languages. But for some reason "God's Little Acre" has never been distributed in the Soviet Union, where several of Caldwell's other works are quite popular.

"I don't suppose the Russians cared for the first word of the title," he remarked

He wrote the book 25 years ago last summer in a Maine farmhouse in three months at a period in life when he was at financial rock bottom.

"I only worked at it on the odd days," he recalled. "On the even days I had to cut wood and raise potatoes."

For 20 years, angered at what Hollywood had done to his "Tobacco Road," Caldwell stubbornly refused all offers to make "God's Little Acre" into a film. Finally he did it himself on a partnership basis.

"But after the film was finished," he added, "the mayor of Augusta wanted us to have the premiere there, but after he had had a private showing to see what he wanted to cut out."

Caldwell, who has fought censorship all his life, made it clear the film's premiere won't be in Augusta,

THE WRITER, a lone and rugged individualist, is the son of a Presbyterian minister. As a child he moved to a new town almost every year. This kept him from making any lifelong friends in his youth, and he observed, "I have none now."

Still a wanderer, he never lives more than seven years in one place, never writes two books in the same room. A martinet in self-discipline, he wrote for seven years-"usually from sundown to sunup"—before he sold his first magazine story.

His years of privation stick in his

"I still save string, rubber bands and paper clips," he said. "I never get rich enough to let it affect my work."

Caldwell rarely reads books now, rarely associates with other writers because he thinks writers-including himself-are pretty dull people socially.

"All writers talk about is their own work," he said. "They don't even know good from oneself. I replied, penuriously, that I felt it was scarcely practical at this time because my private plane, Buttercup III, should not be spared for 1,500-mile detours to a female reconditioning retreat. She asked what alternative I had to offer.

"WELL, I SAID helpfully, "you could be less sedentary and more peripatetic. You could make a modest beginning by walking around performing good works, such as taking my pants to the pressers, instead of morrow's adults will return to playing Bolivia all day.' "I don't play Bolivia," snapped the light of my life. "You must be thinking of somescarcely cracked a book since one else.'

I conceded that this was possible. My bride said it was very difficult for a hostess who served two repasts in one evening to refrain from hitting the fodder a little hard. "What do you mean 'two repasts'?" I: inquired.

"Well," she explained, "we have topranking officialdom for dinner, but later on we let in a batch of the riff-raff for the musicale. We have to clear away the dinnertable and re-set it as a buffet, with snacks for the late-comers. It wouldn't look right? if I let them eat alone so I pile snacks on top of my dinner. Anyway, a musicale makes me hungry. She added that at our last musicale the orchestra had perpetrated an especially scurvy trick by playing "Mammy's Little Baby Loves Short'nin' Bread," and that she had become so overwrought she had a third repast.

I said I could sympathize with her plight, but wondered if she could withstand the rigors of life at Miss Arden's. I said I understood they woke up the "guests" at 7:30 a. m. and made them take a clam bath. I asked how she would like having to bathe in clams, without cocktail sauce, or even a dab of horseradish.

"They wake you up in a very sybaritic Folks who can't push themmanner," she said "They shove a rose under your nose."

I INQUIRED where she had learned that, and she replied that our community's leading drama critic, Richard L. Coe, had featured it in an interview with Beatrice Lillie who had been one of the customers. She said that having a rose stuffed in the bugle was her idea of an aesthetic way to'

We hear and read generalizations about art and culture as well as science, proposals that art and culture be loved and taught, and profundities which inform us that science is also art and that Sputnik is a work of art. Karl Marx is a name which angers Americans, but he was a witty man, and he often put pertinent observations in pithy and cutting sentences. It was Marx who said, "Let the educators become educated." This advice should be extended to the friends of art and culture and the lovers of science who are now needlessly increasing our spiritual warehouses with surplus chaff. Because the Episcopal Church doesn't urge upon its adherents abstinence from tobacco, card playing, dancing, and such like, it has gained the reputation of being "liberal about

We who are Episcopalians don't agree with that idea. In fact, quite the contrary. We find that being an Episcopalian involves some rather well-defined discipline.

But, on this subject of sin, let's ask - just what is it?

The way we look at it—that is, the way it's interpreted to us—sin is defined as the error of imposing our own wills over God's

That interpretation both simplifies and complicates. Knowing God's will for us, we find, demands a life of prayer, a life of faith, a recognition of God's constant presence, the frequent "strengthening and refreshing" of our souls through the Holy Communion.

We recognize the fact that God has given us all things, and that sin is not in the thing itself or its use, but rather in its misuse. This must lead to the conclusion that any intemperance - overeating, for instance, is as much sin as any other abuse of God's gifts.

Wouldn't you like to know more about the teaching of the Episcopal Church? Visit the Episcopal Church near you - soon. Come and worship God with us.

Porter Found In Contempt Of Court Here

Will Be Remanded To State Prison By Court Sentence

Chief Judge George Henderson yesterday found Clarence T. Porter, 55, formerly of Eckhart, still guilty of contempt of court. The decision was made following a hearing in Allegany County Circuit Court.

Porter has been in the county jail for 20 months as a result of being found guilty of contempt in June of 1956.

Instead of remanding him to the County Jail again, Judge Henderson ordered Porter into Fourth Demo the custody of the warden of the Maryland House of Correction.

The judge said Porter will re

In the meantime, Porter's sister, who was sitting in the spectatars' section of the court room. became hysterical, almost fainted, and had to be escorted out-

Then, Vogel suggested to the court that it might be wise if Porter underwent some psychiatric examinations.

The hearing wound up with Porter demanding his rights as an American citizen and insisting upon a change of venue to another circuit. He had suggested Worcester County on the Eastern Shore earlier.

Porter did not testify at yesterday's hearing, although he did submit a statement purporting to show how he had spent the bond money in question. Judge Henderson commented that the statement had no provisions concerning the disposal of some $5,000 received when certain bonds were

The contempt citation arose from an equity suit in which Mrs. Porter had been granted a partial divorce. That decree was granted August 17, 1955. Porter has been confined in the County Jail since June 20, 1956, when Judge Henderson first found him guilty of contempt for failure to turn over $4,217 to his wife and $100 to her lawyer.

Last September 28, Mrs. Porter, through her attorney, William A. Gunter, filed a new equity suit seeking an absolute divorce. A hearing on this matter has been scheduled today in Circuit Court here before Associate Judge Neil C. Fraley of Oakland.

Donors yesterday included 26 first-time volunteers and 12 who gave blood as replacement for blood given friends or relatives. Nine persons were rejected as conors because of colds or minor disabilities. Dr. Blaine Schindler was the physician on duty. The visit also added several names to the Gallon club list for this county.

New One-Gallon Club members added yesterday are Lionel D. Baker, Midland; Paul Burley Jr., Bedford Road; John J. Blough. 1104 Piedmont Avenue; John L. Dunkle Jr., 556 Tarn Terrace, Frostburg; and John D. Delaney, 122 West Main Street, Frostburg.

New Two-Gallon Club members are George J. Schoenadel, 12 Parkside Boulevard: Cecil C. Metz, RD 3, Keyser; and Woodrow Thomas, 14 Klosterman's Addition, LaVale.

Robert Mann, 131 Cumberland Street, became a member of the Three-Gallon Club yesterday.

I think the Red Sox will be erronger than last year because, first of all, we will open the 1953 season with a much better infield than we had a year ago at this time. We know now we have one of the best third basemen in the league, if not the best, in Frank Malzone. Then, too, we have Ken Aspromonte, who looks like he can become a fine second baseman.

Runnels Seen Helping

I know we haven't been very busy in the trade market but the one deal we did make I think is bound to help us. We gave up first baseman Norm Zauchin and Albie Pierson, a very promising young outfielder, for Pete Runnels. Pete is bound to prove very valuable to us because he is equally adept at playing first, second, third or short. That's the kind of player a manager likes to have on his

Lawyer Gets Rebuke By W. Va. Bar

Thomas C. Committe, Wheeling, Gharged With Impropriety

CHARLESTON OF - The West Virginia State Bar's legal ethics committee has made public a reprimand of attorney Thomas C. Committe of Wheeling for certain uses of his office and for other practices it deemed improper.

About seven complaints against Committe were filed several months ago by the grievance committee of the Ohio County Bar Assn. The State Bar's legal ethics committee, headed by R.E. Stealey of Parkersburg, subsequently held hearings on them.

Most of the charges were dismissed. However, Committe was reprimanded on other charges including an allegation that he entered into an accountancy partnership with an elderly and incapacitated acountant unable to carry on his practice.

The report from the state committee said the accounting practice and Committe's law practice were handled from the same office by the same secretary and "resulted in the accused winding up with much of the lucrative part of the elderly accountant's former practice, possibly without adequate compensation to the elderly accountant."

The legal ethics committee said "The over-all picture. . .indicates a lack of the proper conception of the standards of performance to which an attorney is expected to adhere and that some disciplinary action is called for; but these events occurred years ago when the education of the West Virginia Bar in the matter of ethics was st beginning on a formal and WTOP (CBS), Cable 2, WMAL (ABC), Cable 3, WRC (NBC), Cable 4
